*"Spring is the time for love affairs and infatuations.
But then again so is fall. And winter. And summer."*

*Susan Schuth,

"I've lost weight, my muscle tone is gone, and I depress easily. I'm fatigued—tired of people. I feel the need to escape but there's nothing worth turning to anymore."

A sophomore dorm resident

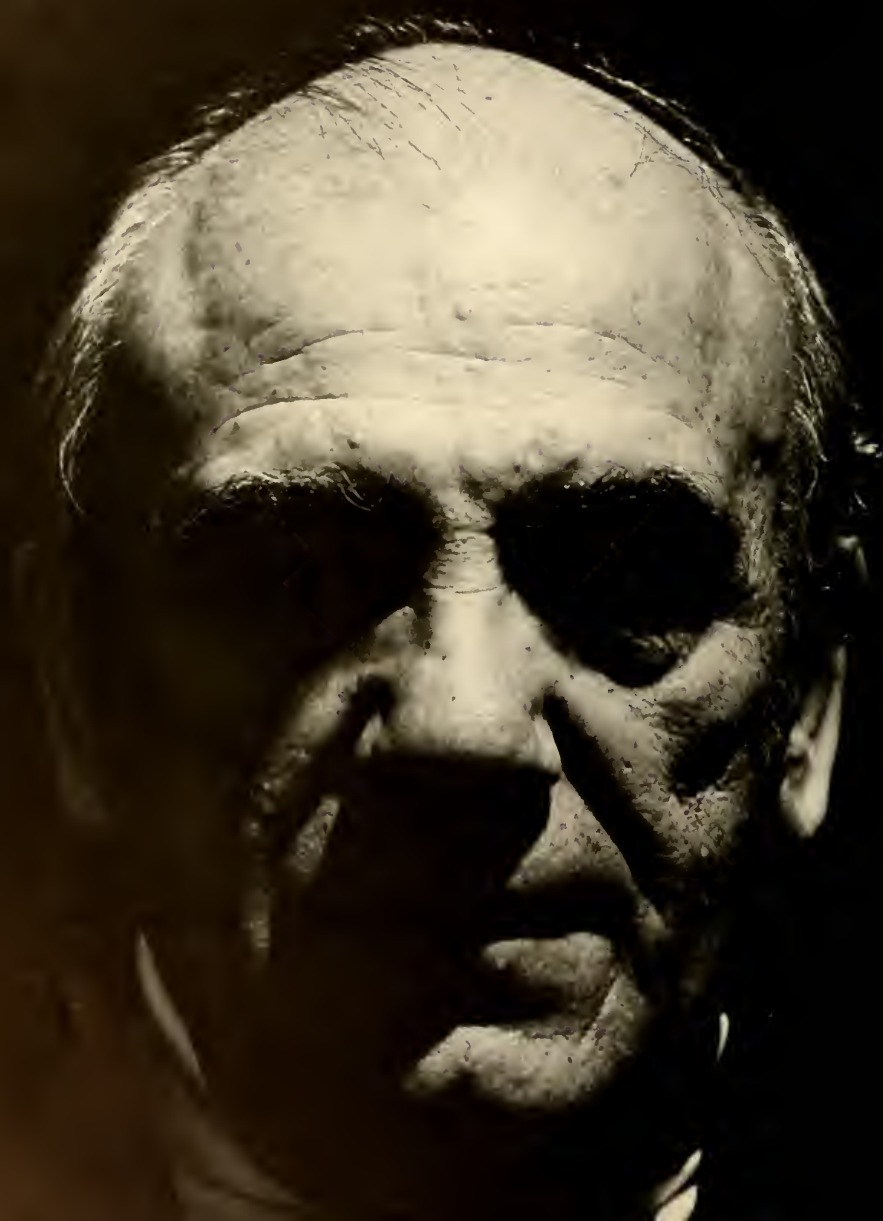

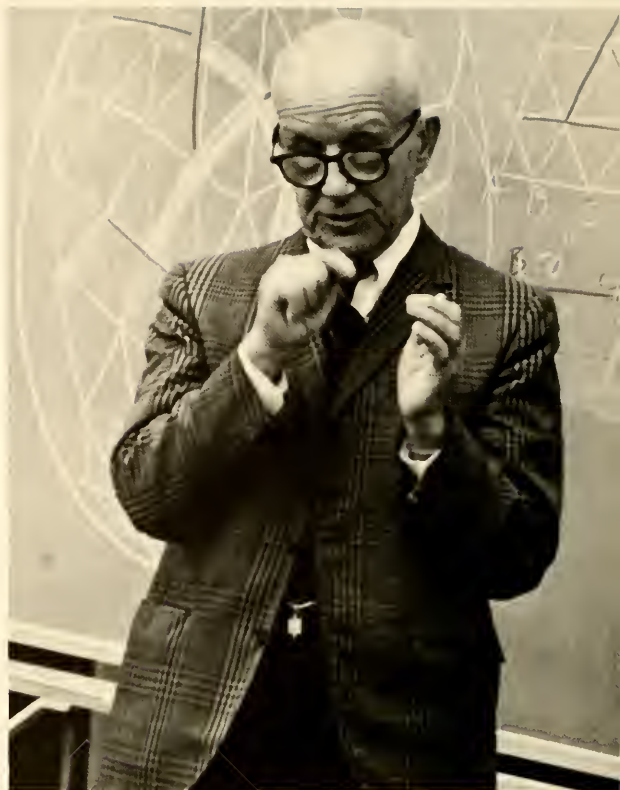

"He's moody but he's done a lot for the students and the Department of Architecture. A lot of guys don't like him but he's probably the best administrator we could have. I like Joe."

Fourth year architecture student, referring to Professor J. R. Morbito, Director, School of Architecture

"Sometimes I think I'm a verb."

Buckminster Fuller

"Success in athletics hasn't changed me. I'm the same old Tink that I was before I won a gold medal, only now people are more interested in what I have to say."

Gerald Tinker, KSU Olympic gold medalist

"The love of man to woman is a thing common and of course, and at first partakes more of instinct and passion than of choice; but true friendship between man and man is infinite and immortal."

"Death in the service of oppression is lighter than a feather; whereas dying for freedom, for peace, for decency, for human dignity, is weightier than Mount Tai..."

"Today is Moratorium Day, and all over the country our comrades are thinking of Kent State, the meaning of what happened here, and how to go on."

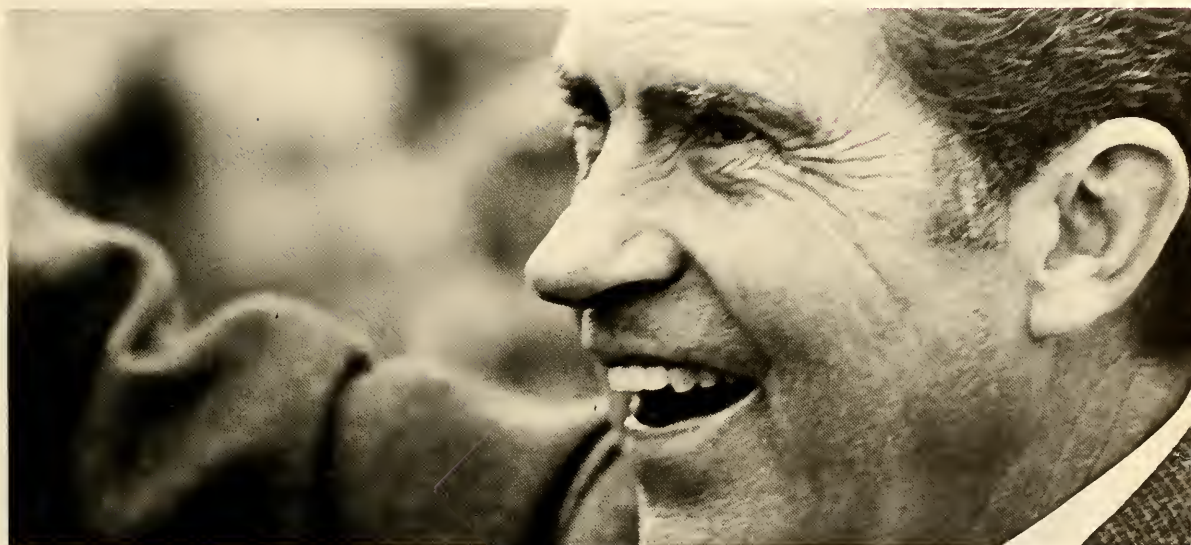

*George Wald
May 4, 1972*

"And that is why, my fellow Americans, tonight I ask for your support of this decision—a decision which has only one purpose: not to expand the war, not to escalate the war, but to end this war and to win the kind of peace that will last. With God's help, with your support, we will accomplish that great goal."

*Richard M. Nixon,
explaining his new course in Indochina,
May 8, 1972*

"It was an individual thing. People felt betrayed, lied to, helpless, mad....hell, you wanted to go out and kick something. The Eleventh Hour channeled a lot of anger into a positive form of protest. At 11 o'clock you had to make a decision, you had to move your body. You were either for the war or against the war. You were either inside...or outside."

*Charles Brill
May 15, 1972*

"Received your warm letter where you tell me you wear a POW bracelet of my son Jesus Gonzales..."

"This last month they brought a picture of a prisoner and we're pretty sure it might be him. We're waiting word from Washington to see if it was him or not. If it is him, I'll write back with great happiness."

*Mrs. Ofelia Garcia,
in a letter,
June 15, 1972*

"People are getting used to being lied to by the president. Maybe it is a tribute, however, that the president has to lie. Think of what it would be like if we were told the truth about what is happening in Vietnam and we accepted it without question or without protest..."

"Just as the Vets risked their lives in Vietnam, so too must we make comparable risks. It will take a lot of understanding and it will take some suffering, but we must take those risks."

*Daniel Ellsberg,
October 4, 1972*

"We are programmed to hate the people of North Vietnam. We are taught to think of them as the enemy rather than as human beings. Because if you think of them as human beings it's a little bit harder to hate them and it's a little bit harder for us to kill them..."

"The North Vietnamese can make the distinction between the American people and their government. While we drop bombs on them they study our history to try and gain a greater understanding of our way of life. When I asked them why they don't hate us they replied, 'If our people ever learn to hate, we are lost.'"

Story by Mary Poidomani

What do you say about a 14-week-old Student Senate that died?

Karen Czujko, Student Body Vice-President, mourned the legislative group as "the victims of institutional oppression."

Student Body President Bob Gage charged that the suspension stemmed from continual frustration: "What's a government if it has nothing to govern?"

"A Student Government can serve no important function on this campus when that government is vested with little legitimate authority. As a sounding board for student concerns, a student organization has possibilities. As a lobbying group, again, a student organization has possibilities. But a government? Who initiated such a facade?"

In quite the opposite vein, and perhaps more representative of the opinions of the student body as a whole, Senator David Voelker eulogized:

"I cannot think of a more fitting end to a body that never was representative of the students. And as far as I can see, the void that will now exist in student representation will probably be better leadership than the irresponsible leadership that has all but destroyed any progress up to now."

And as a STATER editorial asked, "Now that this personal battleground for senators' opinions is closed, what will they do? Who will hear their cries of disapproval and resentment toward each other?"

Sunday, January 28, 1973, will be logged in the history of Kent State University as the day its Student Senate voted to suspend all further business, with the exception of funding allocations, until the end of the academic year.

The measure was criticized as irresponsible by numerous members of the university community, but deemed the only viable solution to the struggle for student autonomy in the eyes of the sponsors of the bill, who concluded that for the most part, the functions and sources of Student Government were "meaningless and negligible to the best interests of the student body."

This question of student control, a source of friction between university administrators and Student Government officials throughout fall and winter quarters, climaxed in the controversy over insufficient student influence in policy decisions affecting the operations of the new University Center.

On January 14, the Senate voted to evict three members of Student Group Affairs from their offices on the second floor of the University Center and allocate the space to student organizations. This attempt at administrative autonomy set off a chain of events which culminated in a split between the branches of Student Government and the eventual disbanding of the Student Senate.

What had begun as an effort to secure more office space in the new center for neglected campus organizations, soon evolved into a volatile issue of student authority in the administration of the building itself.

Later that week, student organization leaders, with Karen Czujko as their spokeswoman, met with Dr. Glenn Olds to propose the formation of a policy board to deal with the administration of the University Center for immediate consideration by the Board of Trustees. A decision was demanded by the following Wednesday with the promise of further action if no answer was received by the specified date.

The question of the possible effectiveness of this approach will remain unanswered, for in an unexpected breach of solidarity, Student Body President Gage denounced the "confrontation politics" of Czujko and her group and proposed a more moderate plan of his own to "give the University Center back to the students" at a press conference held the next day.

Vice-President Czujko voiced her objection to the proposals, which were written without her knowledge, and the secretive manner in which they were formulated after the press conference, where she had appeared as an unexpected observer.

"This proposal has gained acceptance by the administration on the basis of much work done to raise the issue by many other interested and sincerely concerned students," Czujko said. "I think it would be correct to say that many of us feel a strong sense of betrayal at this exercise of executive authority."

An editorial which appeared in the STATER the following day observed that, "it appears now that Gage and Czujko cannot pass and catch the same ball with each other and that Student Government, misrepresentative and weak that it is, is being internally torn apart...Internal strife can defeat many great issues as well as governing bodies."

The following Sunday the Senate voted almost unanimously to suspend business except for funding allocations for the remainder of the year.

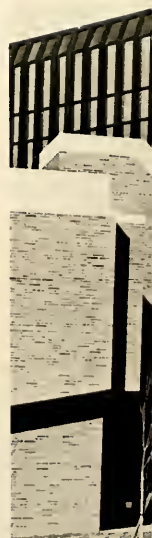

Czujko summarized Senate's reasoning saying, "Working within Student Government this year we have realized the futility of trying to deal with the administration for the benefit of the students, when we have no legitimate power base from which to work."

Czujko felt that effective student power rested with the support and participation of the mass of students on campus--"a thing Student Government has miserably failed to achieve." Rather than uniting as students against the unjust policies of the administration in regard to the new Student Union, we fought among ourselves, and consequently, being divided against each other, we were each conquered separately. We will no longer serve the administration to achieve its own end."

Gage endorsed the suspension, adding that the efforts of the Senate would be rechanneled into other areas. "In the next few months, we will investigate new patterns of student association, but regardless of what design is selected, the present system will be abandoned. This system just can't work."

Student Government, 1973...may it rest in peace.

"It's a completely different environment from Franklin Hall—it's kind of like a new car. It looks new and smells new."

"Prejudice against women is an idea that still strikes nearly all men, and I'm afraid most women, bizarre. It is the women who can bring empathy, tolerance, insight and patience and persistence to government--the qualities we have naturally or have had to develop because of our suppression by men."

Representative Shirley Chisholm

"I didn't know nothin' about it. I get out here, and here the walk's all clean and I thought to myself: Who's doin' this now? Can't be the neighbors because they--you know--ha, ha--they ain't that benevolent, even though they help you out. I started out by walkin' all the way up here, you know, to come to the corner here, and shovelled all the way up--up here, and finally--ha, ha--Paul told me about it. That they, that they done it. I didn't even know they had a snow squad, you know."

production notes

The 1973 Chestnut Burr is a photographic history of Kent State University, from March 1972, to March 1973.

The book contains 288 pages, 9x12 trim size.

Paper is Champion Papers, Javelin, Dull Finish/80 lb., supplied by the Brewer-Chilcote Paper Company, Cleveland, Ohio.

The two piece cover is produced by the Durand Manufacturing Company, Chicago, Illinois. It is Navy colored Bradford Linen, BL-3467, and 129 Matte Finish-70 lb. Kraft Pyroxylin Coated Foil. Art work is printed in black ink on a stamped field.

All the photographs contained in the Chestnut Burr were taken by student photographers at Kent State University. Black and white and color photographs were printed in the Chestnut Burr dark rooms. Special color effects were designed by the editor and produced either by the yearbook staff or the printer.

Copy used was prepared by students in the Chestnut Burr office and includes headlines set in Cello-Tak, Transfer Type, 3226-L and 3226-C. Body copy is Press Roman, 11 pt, Bold Italic. Seniors names are Press Roman, 9 pt, Medium.

Seniors were photographed by Delma Studios, New York, New York.

A first run of 7,500 books was printed and bound by the Benson Printing Company, Nashville, Tennessee.

comment

The 1970's are ushering in many changes for our lives. For a number of reasons, students are questioning the value or relevance of their college education. Men are no longer concerned about avoiding the draft and women have realized that there is more to college than finding a suitable mate. The college diploma is no longer a ticket to a secure job, with many graduates finding that they are over-educated or under-experienced to qualify for the job they want.

College students are now finding it necessary to question the quality of their education as it relates to the "real world." Many students are looking for knowledge they can find outside of the classroom. New activities are growing and some time-honored traditions are falling by the wayside.

With these changes the style of the CHESTNUT BURR is also undergoing a metamorphosis. The traditional bound collection of "group portraits" is no longer with us. This year the CHESTNUT BURR has attempted to outline a chronological coverage of events which took place on the Kent State University campus during the last three quarters.

Photographs provide most of the information in this book. Because the camera, when held by a photographer, provides for a restricted viewpoint, the photographs should not be considered to show "everything" that has happened. This yearbook provides a grouping of many events which were important in the past year of Kent's history. In addition to photographs, a Calendar of the past three quarters events is included, for reference now and in future years.

When paging through these photographs remember the activities of your college years on the KSU campus, and if you can, think of yourself as an individual in a city of twenty-thousand.
